1. There was no ceremony involved in the payment of troops in the 7th Co., 3rd Bn., 290th Gds. Rifle Regt. The company commander drew the payroll from regiment which, in turn, had drawn it from the division finance section. The company clerk generally paid the troops for the company commander. Personnel were notified once a month by the first sergeant that their pay was ready to be picked up from the company clerk. the following pay scale was in effect as of Fall 1952:
- Privates received 40 schillings (one ruble was equivalent to 6½ Austrian schillings) per month, 13 of which were deducted for government loan. Ten months a year the private received a receipt for 20 rubles which was entered into the government lottery upon his return to the USSR.
  - Privates First Class received the same pay as a private unless he was a specialist with responsibility; that is, gunner on a MIG, chief of a radio station, chief telephone operator (determined by the Platoon Leader), head cook in a supply platoon (determined by the Platoon Leader), a company clerk. These specialists all received 55 schillings a month.
  - Junior Sergeants and Sergeants also received pay in accordance with their duties. A squad leader, for instance, received 58 schillings per month (minus so many for government loan which were retained until his return to the USSR).
  - Master Sergeant (a First Sergeant) received 117 schillings, and 175 rubles per month (retained until his return to the USSR).
